“ Aunt Jo was a special person. We loved it when she and Uncle Don would stop by after dining out on Friday or Saturday nights. We knew they were coming when our dog Jody (name after Jo and Don) would perk her ears up and run to the front door, hearing the engine of their big black Olds 98 way before we did, as they pulled in to the side of the house to park. We would all scurry for robes, or shoes or whatever as Aunt Jo always just walked in without a knock and announced "Put the coffee pot on". The kitchen table was always the place they went for coffee and maybe a couple of hands of cards. We equally loved going out to her house, for those special small bottle of coke, and the best baked black raspberry pie around. She was an excellent cook. Jo and Don were ahead of their time in many respects...as he helped out a lot around the house and they both worked at the local PC. She loved good clothes, good perfume, good jewelry (particularly diamonds) and good food. She had the most beautiful hair and nails, and once made me promise that she would never be buried without nail polish. She has been a good influence in many ways in my life and I was so happy to get to see her when I was home last...I always tried to see her when I returned to Indiana. I agree with my sister, she always made us feel like queens when we were younger, at our birthdays...with special outings to restaurants and being taught manners and never to say "I don't like it" but try it once and then say "I don't care for it, thank you!" Aunt Jo, you will be missed.,

“ Aunt Jo was always pleasant to be around. Uncle Don and Aunt Jo would visit us when I was growing up on Fridays or Saturday evenings. We didn't know when to expect them but we always had nice visits. Aunt Jo was a very positive person and she would make you feel good just being around her. I loved how Uncle Don and Aunt Jo would take me out for a birthday dinner and make me feel like a queen. I thank her for Uncle Don for the love and support they always gave me. She was one special aunt. Jane Muller,
