“ I found Mrs. Craig's obituary in the paper this morning and was very sad to see it. I did not know her except for about 15 minutes about 2 months ago. I met her at Reid in the cat scan waiting room when my father was in for a scan. She was there to get one herself. She was forcing down that awful contrast liquid you have to drink. She offered to move when me and my daughter walked in, so we could sit together. We told her she was fine and began speaking to one another. Of course we loved her accent. She offered her story and I told her that I had had cancer too. We talked about how scared it makes you, and it makes you nervous about the silliest things. God sent her to be an Angel to me that day. I was coming up on my 3 month cancer check up and I was nervous. She reassured me that I was fine. I thanked her and told her that I wished her the very best as well. My daughter and I got up to leave when my father was done and I turned to say goodbye and told her it was nice to talk to her and she looked me right in the eye and said, "everythings going to be okay now, ok...ok" She practiced being an Angel that day and today she is. I am so sorry for your loss.,

“ I'm Richard, husband of Suzanne's only daughter Janet. I first met Suzanne, my new mother-in-law, at the wedding of Janet's daughter Jennifer. It was a magnificent wedding of a size and formality I found a bit intimidating -- what with my tuxedo and black tie. The wedding, and especially Jennifer, was beautiful and moving. I felt very outside and out-of-place until Suzanne and Webster came in, sitting at the table next to ours. Suzanne and I seemed to instantly like and understand each other -- her French accent and exquisite manners charmed me. Soon I was feeling like part of the family. I'll always remember her for that gift of inclusion and acceptance. I've always been extraordinarily shy -- but you know what? By the end of the ceremonies I was so alive and happy, thanks to Suzanne, that I asked her for the last dance and she accepted. For the first time in my life, I waltzed on a Grand Ballroom floor. That was seven years ago. Seven years of fine French manners. Thank you, Suzanne, and I know you're reading this as I write it. God bless you.,
