“ My heart goes out to everyone who loved and knew Ted. I am his daughter in law but unfortunately I didn't have an opportunity to meet him in person. I've heard many stories of him throughout the years. I'm grateful for the many phone calls throughout the last decade as a way of getting to know him and those will be cherished as memories. For his wife Sharon, my heartfelt sympathies. May you find peace and comfort in all the wonderful memories you shared together.

To my husband Eric and my sister-in-law Cheryl. We often reflect the best parts of our parents in us, no matter how old we are or how much time has passed in relationships, the loss of a parent can never be easy. You're in my thoughts and I love you. ❤️

“ If it were not Ted being Joy’s brother, it would not be likely Ted and I would have ever met and formed a bond of lasting friendship. I will remember Ted for the things he and I shared -- both events and conversations. Ted was an automobile and a history enthusiast having read extensively on both, as well as the fiction he enjoyed from the likes of Clive Cussler, Tom Clancy, Michael Crichton, and John Grisham. He enjoyed telling me his encyclopedic knowledge on the mechanical and performance specifications of classic, sports, and muscle cars of yesteryear. At this, he was at his best when together we took in car shows. He would also recall historic events and famous people biographic information at appropriate times in conversations, often inflecting with his own brand of humor. The same was true from his own life dating back to “stories” from his childhood and early adulthood – at times, I thought embellished for effect. To say he was a great conversationalist is an understatement. Just wind him up on one of his favorite topics and he could nearly “talk your ear off.” His sarcasm and irony were his trademark.

I will miss Ted dearly and pray he rests in eternal peace.
